

Sensational Gun Fight Believed to Be Work of John Dillinger Gang

Slippery Desperado Believed to Have Taken Part in Gun Fight Near Chicago Friday Night—Federal Officers Continue to Act in Dillinger Escape.

Chicago, March 10 (AP).—A sensational gun fight in which the police believe John Dillinger, "kill-crazy" jail breaker, was the chief gunner, sent investigators on an intensified hunt for the slippery desperado today.

The fight occurred late last night in suburban Schiller Park between gunmen and Police Chief Robert Christian, whose car was completely disabled by gunfire.

The men, whose leader was identified by James Gaskin, a chauffeur, as Dillinger, escaped. They are believed to have gone to a hideout in Wisconsin.

Chief Christian had pursued two speeding sedans, as he drew up to within ten feet of the larger of the two, a gun was thrust through the rear window. Shots scattered all around the chief, but he was unhurt. He returned the fire, but without apparent effect, and the two cars sped away.

One of the machines was believed to have been the same one stolen earlier in the night from Mrs. Herman Stern, by whom Gaskin is employed. Gaskin told police that three or four men in another car kidnapped him, stole Mrs. Stern's car, took him along with them and then forced him out, roaring away to safety. From pictures he said he recognized Dillinger as one of the men.

Federal officials delivered their second blow in the Dillinger affair by ordering the arrest of Ernest Blunk, fingerprint expert, who is accused of locking Matt Brown, one of Dillinger's guards, in a cell shortly before Dillinger escaped. Previously the government removed its eight prisoners from the Crown Point jail to South Bend.

The order for Blunk's arrest was based on the allegation that he violated the Dyer act by driving a stolen automobile across the Indiana-Illinois line with Dillinger as a passenger last Saturday when Dillinger escaped with the aid of a wooden pistol. The automobile, stolen from Sheriff Lillian Holley, later was found abandoned in Chicago. Blunk protested that he was compelled to do the driving at the point of a gun.

Agrees He Wrote to Delaney on Strew

A. H. Hamilton Admits Writing Letter to District Attorney Not in Accord With His Beliefs.

Court Room, Albany, N. Y., March 10 (AP).—On cross examination today Albert H. Hamilton, of Auburn, handwriting expert, agreed he had written a letter to District Attorney John T. Delaney declaring the same man who wrote the John J. O'Connell, Jr., kidnaping ransom letters was the same who signed "Manny Strew" to specimens submitted to him by Delaney.

The letter was in direct variance with Hamilton's testimony for the defense yesterday when he said Strew did not write the ransom notes.

Strew, intermediary in the kidnaping negotiations with the politically powerful O'Connell family, is on trial for kidnaping.

Quickly moving the examination, Assistant District Attorney Joseph J. Casey, asked Hamilton if he wrote a letter to Delaney on August 10, which in part said:

"It is my opinion all the kidnap letters were written by the same person. The person who wrote the ransom letters and signed them 'Manny Strew' was the person who wrote the kidnap notes. This finding cannot be modified by other findings."

Hamilton said he had written the letter, dated August 10, 1933, ten days after O'Connell's release. The state sought an opinion from Hamilton as to the writer of the ransom notes.

Casey also read a letter dated August 17 which quoted Hamilton as saying:

"I have not sent you the full report held for further request writings. It is not necessary as I found nothing to alter my first opinion. Make no plans for more request writings."

Suddenly Casey shot this question at Hamilton:

"Tell the date when you changed your opinion."

"It has never changed," the witness replied.

"Have you changed your opinion?"

"No, sir, not my first opinion."

"Do you mean to say you gave me an opinion on those letters last summer that was not the opinion you really held?"

"Yes, Hamilton said.

"Do you mean to tell this jury you deceived me?"

"I don't care what the jury thinks."

President Curtails Army Air Corps On Flying Mails

All But Most Necessary Flying to be Eliminated—President's Secretary Says Action Resulted When 10 Lives Were Lost in 19 Days Army Has Been Flying the Mails—Will Take Every Precaution.

Washington, March 10 (AP).—President Roosevelt today curtailed army flying of the mails.

Motivating the action was loss of life in the undertaking.

Even at the time of the action more protests were being raised in Congress against the army carriage of the mails which have been followed by ten deaths of army fliers, three of whom were actually carrying mail at the time.

The President acted after a conference with General Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff, and Major General Foulis, chief of the army air corps.

He ordered the elimination of all but the most necessary air mail flying. He further directed every safeguard humanly possible be thrown about the equipment and personnel of the army air service.

In announcing the curtailment, Stephen Early, a secretary to the President, stated the action was the result of the loss of the ten lives in the 19 days in which the army has been flying the mail.

He recalled that assurance was given when it took over the air mail service that it could safely undertake the job but he said Mr. Roosevelt regarded the casualties as far too great.

Early said the President recognized the army fliers had been faced with unusually severe and adverse weather conditions, but nevertheless he was aroused by the deaths.

At the war department at the time was going on a conference between Secretary Dorn, Assistant Secretary Woodring and Charles A. Lindbergh on the subject of army aviation in general. It appeared clear that, although air mail might have been touched on indirectly, it was not the primary topic.

In Congress, meanwhile, house Democrats for a second consecutive day blocked Republican attempts to start a discussion of the fatalities. Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (R-Mass.) could not get unanimous consent for consideration of her resolution expressing it as the sense of the house that the army should immediately cease carrying the mails.

Representative Fish (R-N.Y.) offered a resolution directing the speaker to appoint a special committee of five members to investigate airmail carrying by the army, as well as equipment used by army pilots and their training. Speaker Rainey declined to recognize him for the purpose.

Details of the President's order were not immediately given out but, it was understood to include a command for a complete check up of the planes and personnel of the air service and a consolidation of the airmail service into the most necessary routes.

Supreme Court Judge John T. Loughran has signed an order granting alimony and counsel fees to Helen M. Pintard in the divorce action brought by William A. Pintard against Helen M. Pintard. Frank W. Brooks appears for defendant. The order of Judge Loughran provides for payment of $250 counsel fees within 30 days, or in the event of a trial prior to the expiration of that period, payment of the counsel fees before the trial. Alimony in the sum of $10 a week from January 22, 1934, is also granted pending trial of the action. Payment of the back alimony is to be made on or before March 12.

With Each 5 Pounds New Things Happen

Chicago, March 10 (AP).—The last five pounds Mrs. Laura Johnston put on may wreck her home.

When she married in 1928, she weighed 125 pounds. In a divorce suit, filed yesterday, she set forth these allegations, with a chronology of her weight:

125 pounds—Frank Johnston gave her a cross look.

145—Unkind remarks.

155—Thrown out of her home.

164—Thrown out again and called "fat."

165 pounds—Broke scales, and thrown out again.

These things, she alleged, constituted cruelty since she had "no control over the course of nature."

Lindbergh Called By Dorn For Opinion On Aviation Questions

Flying Colonel May Visit President Later Today—Lindbergh's Counsel Sought in Many Aviation Problems.

Washington, March 10 (AP).—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh accepted an invitation from Secretary Dorn to confer with him today and present his views on the entire army aviation question.

"I desire to have an accurate first-hand information on all aviation questions as possible," the cabinet member said, "and so I requested Colonel Lindbergh to come to Washington and give me the benefit of his long experience in aviation."

"I consider him one of the greatest living aeronautical authorities and I know that he will be able to give us a great amount of information on many pertinent questions we are now considering."

Asked whether Lindbergh's visit had any connection with mail, Dorn replied:

"Colonel Lindbergh and I will discuss the army's carrying the air mail in this emergency but his visit is not primarily in that connection."

Bareheaded and without a topcoat, Lindbergh went alone from his hotel to the war department by taxicab.

He conferred with Dorn over the big round table in the general staff conference room.

Secretary Dorn was asked by newspapermen if Lindbergh would visit the White House and replied:

"I shall take him to see the president if he asks me."

The impression prevailed that Lindbergh would visit the White House later in the day.

Economy in Local Government Sought

Advocate Less Expensive City and County Governments as Means of Helping Solve Municipal Financial Problems.

Garden City, L. I., March 10 (AP).—Control of municipal budgets and borrowing was the proposal today of State Tax Commissioner Mark Graves in preference to an increased state sales tax.

Reform of local governments and their finances, instead of the suggested two per cent sales tax, were advocated last night by Mr. Graves in a speech before the Long Island Chamber of Commerce as a means of helping municipalities with their financial problems.

Abandonment of the direct state tax on real property and sharing of state revenue with them has already added $100,000,000 annually to municipalities' incomes, he estimated.

"Now another $100,000,000 is asked," Mr. Graves said. "A two per cent sales tax is recommended as the method of raising it."

If this is granted, how soon will it be before they are back asking for a third $100,000,000 gift?

"The predicament of New York state's localities can best be met by (A) simplifying and reorganizing local government in the interests of lower taxes, (B) reducing the cost of local government to the ability of the people to pay for it, (C) require every unit of government to employ proper budgeting methods, and (D) establish methods of controlling municipal budgets and municipal borrowing."

Graves county, in which Garden City is located, was cited by the speaker as an example of need for the simplified government proposed, also by Governor Lehman. Mr. Graves said the county has 304 governmental units, 100 fire fighting units, 69 assessing officers, 113 tax collectors and about 70 officers taking care of streets and highways.

French Explorers Plan Second Visit To Sheba's Capital

Hope to Retrace Their Hazardous Course Over Desert Wastes to Site of Discovery They Reported Thursday Night.

Paris, March 10 (AP).—Two French aerial explorers prepared today for a return flight to what they believe is the ancient capital of the glamorous Queen of Sheba.

Within the next few days, the two—Andre Malraux and Capt. Cornillon Molinier—hope to retrace their hazardous course over desert wastes to the site of the discovery they reported Thursday night. This time, however, they plan to land. They hope to enter and explore the long sought, mysterious city, instead of merely circling overhead in their plane.

In a message to the air ministry telling of their plans, Malraux, author and archaeologist, failed to give the exact geographical location of what he believes is the ancient capital.

Malraux merely said they had found the "legendary city" on the north boundary of the great Arabian or Ruba-el-Khali desert, the most desolate desert in the world.

It was indicated that the city which the explorers said they saw and photographed from the air—two towers or temples still standing—was about 1,000 miles southeast of Jerusalem on the west side of Arabia.

The two were heard from by telegram from Djibouti, French Somaliland. They have established a base there.

From this point they will face again an even chance of death in flying 900 miles over the desert to reach the spot where they believe lies the city for which men have searched 2,000 years.

Following that route on their first flight, they passed over the Straits of Bab-el-Mendeb and the sandy wastes of the desert—wastes which, so far as is known, have been traversed only twice by Europeans, both Englishmen, in separate expeditions two years ago.

The adjacent territory, which formerly was part of the great queen's realm, is inhabited by wild, blood-thirsty tribes owing allegiance to none and carrying a threat of swift death to any luckless travelers falling in their hands.

Apparently Captain Molinier and Malraux believe their grave risks are justified. Archaeologists and others long have believed that great wealth might be found if the city ever were revealed.

Today, it was pointed out that if the "twenty towers or temples" reported were, as the explorer said, partly sand-covered, they probably have been well preserved.

The site of the ancient city always has been a subject of speculation among archaeologists. Egyptians, Greeks and Romans could never agree where it was situated.

Pliny the elder placed it in Yemen, on the eastern coast of the Red Sea, the Latins favored some corner of the Arabian mountains.

Modern research workers have been divided between the towns of Mareb, in Yemen province, and Meib, but recently experts have inclined to the theory that the city is in the region of Naith, the location of which appears more in keeping with ancient descriptions of the queen's capital.

The geo-sold quest for the city has cost many lives. One European reached Meib and Lyir and three others got to Mareb. Other expeditions were captured and killed by wild tribesmen or perished from thirst in the burning sands.

City Mail Delivery Service Curtailed By Order of Farley

Postmaster General Says Budget Requirements Necessitate Reduction—Collections Will be Maintained.

Curtailments in the Kingston city mail delivery service are necessary under orders received from the Post Office Department. An order issued by Postmaster General James A. Farley states that the budget requirements of the department make necessary the reduction in expenditures for personnel and curtailment of certain services. This order is in effect for the remaining four months of the present fiscal year, which ends June 30.

To the extent that it is necessary to meet the department's requirements, postmasters throughout the United States are authorized to curtail service so as to limit deliveries by carriers to one day in strictly residential territory, not more than two days in mixed business and residential territory, and not more than three days in strictly business territory. Under this order, the business territory of cities like New York, Chicago and other large places would be restricted to three deliveries a day.

Surplus carrier time will be used to augment the clerical forces during the peak periods of the day and at other times. The use of substitutes will be restricted to emergency requirements.

Changes at the Kingston Post Office have been in process during the past week and will be completed on Monday with curtailed delivery service in the residential sections. Postmaster Edward L. Merritt stated today that for the present there will not be any curtailment in the collection service in the business sections either on week days or Sundays, and that mails will be dispatched in accordance with the regular schedules. To afford the best collection service, letters should be posted in the afternoon in the Broadway, Strand and Wall street business sections.

According to the New York Times, Postmaster John J. Kieley of New York city stated that collections and deliveries to residential sections of that city would be retarded. One delivery a day was put into effect at East Orange, N. J., early in the present week.

All presidential postmasters, officials and employees in the field service, except railway postal clerks, will be furloughed without pay for four days during the remainder of the fiscal year. Railway postal clerks will be furloughed without pay for 34 days during the remainder of the fiscal year. Annual leave with pay for all employees has been discontinued.

Petitions Against Eliminating Bridge Tolls Circulated

Members of Common Council Friday Evening Signed Such a Petition Which is Being Circulated in City—Claim Elimination of Tolls Would Place Entire Cost of Bridge Construction on Taxpayers.

Petitions protesting against the proposed legislation contained in a bill, sponsored by Clifford L. Miller of Claverack, and introduced in the state legislature on February 14, by Assemblyman Emerson D. Pitts of Dutchess county, are being circulated in Kingston. One of the petitions was brought to the attention of the members of the common council Friday evening before the council meeting, and all of the aldermen signed the petition.

The petition states it would nullify the power of veto, now vested in the state superintendent of public works, relative to bridge toll rates, and would grant unrestricted supervision and control thereof to the three members of an advisory committee, known as the New York State Bridge Authority. Proposed legislation, according to the petition, threatens to jeopardize the fulfillment of the present definite program for repairing state indebtedness incurred specifically for the construction of the Mid-Hudson bridge at Poughkeepsie; the construction of the new Rip Van Winkle bridge at Hudson, and the potential acquisition by the state of the privately owned Bear Mountain Bridge.

Kingston residents who oppose the proposed legislation claim that if the bill is passed it would place the entire cost of bridge operation on all of the taxpayers instead of those who use the bridge. The elimination of tolls on the Poughkeepsie bridge, it is claimed, would have a distinct tendency to attract business in southern Ulster to Poughkeepsie.

Handkerchief Factory Closed

The Shawangunk Country Club at Ellenville has waived initiation fees on new individual memberships until further notice, new members paying annual dues will be entitled to all membership privileges.

Junior League to Locate Quarters in Municipal Building

Unable to Pay Rent of Meadow Street Building and Aldermen Grant Them Permission to Use Room in Building on East O'Reilly Street to Carry on Baby Clinic.

The Junior League sent in a communication to the Common Council Friday evening, asking permission to use one of the rooms in the Municipal Building on East O'Reilly street for the purpose of carrying on the League's child welfare activities. The communication stated that due to the circumstances of the times it found itself unable to pay the rent at its headquarters on Meadow street.

Mrs. George V. D. Hutton and Mrs. Robert K. Rolfe of the Junior League were in attendance at the meeting.

Alderman Tremper introduced a resolution that the request be granted and asked for a recess of five minutes to give the building and supply committee an opportunity to report on the request, which was granted.

The committee, when the meeting was resumed, reported favorably on granting the request.

Alderman Epstein introduced a resolution authorizing the building committee to place the room in condition for the use of the Junior League, which was unanimously adopted.

It was stated that the room to be used as headquarters in the Municipal Building was the one used as a carpenter shop.

For a number of years the Junior League has been carrying on child welfare work at headquarters established on Meadow street.

Other matters taken up at the council meeting will be found elsewhere.

Central Business Men Elect Officers for '34, O'Reilly Is President

At the meeting of the Central Business Men's Association Friday night at the Y. M. C. A. for the purpose of electing officers the following were unanimously chosen to head the organization for the ensuing year: William O'Reilly, president; Frank L. Brown, vice president; Ralph B. Deyo, secretary; Henry Bruck, treasurer.

This panel of executives succeeds the 1933 group which was made up of John W. Matthews, president; F. Gilderleeve, vice president; Munroe Southard, secretary, and Gustave Telcher, treasurer.

The board of directors and standing committees are to be named by President O'Reilly later.

One order of business transacted was the adoption of a motion by Henry Bruck that the association go on record as favoring Mayor Conrad J. Heffelman's plan to establish an industrial committee of citizens with an office at the city hall for the purpose of making quick contact with any industrial firm or individual seeking information regarding what may be secured in Kingston in regard to factory sites or like information.

The men read, but took no action for the present, on circulars in the form of petitions objecting to a proposal to eliminate tolls on the bridges crossing the Hudson river.

No definite date was set for the next meeting, the president being empowered to call a session whenever he deems it necessary.

Memorial Services for Lieut. Otto Wienecke

There will be memorial services for the late Lieutenant Otto Wienecke of the U. S. Aviation Corps, Monday evening, at the Citizens Conservation Corps camp, Boiceville, conducted by the Rev. James Coffey of Phenicia, who has charge of Protestant services at the camp, where the lieutenant had been in command for eight months.

Lieutenant Wienecke, "one of the army's very best fliers," according to officers at Floyd Bennett Field, was killed Friday morning near Burton, Ohio, when his army airmail plane crashed in the midst of a heavy snow squall on a pasture lot. He had been stationed at the Boiceville C. C. for eight months, leaving there in February to join the ranks of army fliers carrying mail out of Newark, N. J., to Cleveland, Ohio.

The common council meeting in adjourned session Friday evening granted unanimously the request of the local CWA for an appropriation of $20,000 to cover the cost of material, engineering costs and supervision on projects during the month of March, and after adopting by a vote of 10 to 3 a resolution asking the state industrial board to allow the city to carry its own compensation insurance, devoted considerable time and oratory to the question.

Report on CWA

The finance, ways and means committee submitted the following report:

The finance, ways and means committee held a meeting on Thursday afternoon, March 8 in the office of the city clerk, at which time the request of the local Civil Works Administration for an additional appropriation of $20,000 which was submitted to the Common Council at the meeting held on March 6, was taken up. In addition to the committee which is composed of Alderman Tremper, Jr., chairman, Cornwell and Kelly, others present included Alderman-at-large Schwank, Alderman Epstein, City Clerk Dempsey and H. S. Shultz, executive director of the local Civil Works Administration.

Mr. Shultz stated that Kingston is receiving a high rating in regard to the work being accomplished by the local CWA and it is his impression that Kingston is in a favorable position to receive assistance, if the CWA is discontinued after March 31. A communication appearing in the Kingston Daily Freeman of March 8 from the chairman of the state federal CWA commending the local committee for its contribution to the civil works program and also stating that under the new plan it is expected that work will be provided on a relief basis to needy unemployed in this state, was read.

The $20,000 requested is to cover the cost of materials for the month of March. It is estimated by the local CWA that an additional $25,000 will be needed to complete the project set up.

The $60,000 appropriated at the February meeting of the Common Council plus the $20,000 appropriated at the December meeting was to cover the cost of materials to February 15th at which time it was expected the CWA would be discontinued.

The question of whether or not the amount estimated to finish the projects set up should be appropriated was discussed and the finance committee was of the opinion it had no right to do so as there is no assurance of what status the work will be completed under if the CWA is not in existence after March 31.

Mr. Shultz stated that when the projects set up have been completed the federal government will have expended in Kingston for wages approximately the sum of $250,000. The government has allowed Kingston the sum of $25,000 which is given in the form of materials. To complete the projects it is estimated the total cost to the city of Kingston will be $125,000 which covers the cost of architecture and engineering fees and materials from the beginning of the projects until their completion.

When asked as to what extent the discontinuance of the CWA would have on the projects set up, Mr. Shultz stated the local Civil Works Authority takes up until May 1st. He also gave the information that the government would pay the wages on projects to be completed if the CWA ceases to function after March 31st.

The attention of the streets where sewer excavations had been made was called to the attention of Mr. Shultz and he informed the committee that as soon as weather conditions permit these streets insofar as the parts effected where the sewers had been placed, would be taken care of as part of the work of the local CWA.

The finance committee feels that Kingston is indeed fortunate in being able to have these much needed sewers laid as projects under the CWA. For the city to have undertaken to accomplish this work would have cost about $500,000. The local Civil Works committee, Henry Forst, chairman; Nicholas Hogeboom, Alva S. Staples, the executive director; Harford Shultz and Max Reben, purchasing agent, are to be complimented on the work accomplished. They have endeavored to have accomplished the largest amount of necessary work possible with the least possible cost for materials as is possible to do so. With the system in force in the local CWA office in the matter of purchasing materials many a dollar has been saved the taxpayers and yet the quality of material desired has been obtained. The average person does not realize the magnitude of the work involved in the administration of the affairs of the CWA office. To better understand the amount of work which is necessary in the administration of

Famous Sons Of Famous Fathers

NO. 10—THE HOLMESES: POET AND JURIST

This is the last of a series of 10 articles on famous fathers and famous sons.

By MELVIN E. COLEMAN

New York (AP).—Kindly, punctilious Oliver Wendell Holmes, the "great liberal" of the supreme court of the United States, was his humanitarianism to his poet father, his legal acumen to his mother, the daughter of a chief justice of Massachusetts.

It was, in fact, from the poet of his maternal grandfather that the retired Nestor of the high court went to Washington.

Through his father's family he is related to the Wendells and Quinsys, names which reflect leadership in New England and the nation from the beginnings of the republic. So, too, his mother's family, the Jacksons, trace back to early distinction in far-off, pre-colonial days there was in London Thomas Holmes, a lawyer.

Alike in Personality

The two distinguished namesakes of this and a preceding generation were alike more in personality than in achievement. The poet and writer of Lincoln's time was a physician by profession and a literary light, at first, only by avocation. It was not until he was 45 years old that Holmes the elder definitely "arrived" in the field which made him famous.

The son, except for the Civil War service which interrupted his studies, always has been a lawyer. Both were, however, lecturers at Harvard, the father in medicine, the son in law.

The name "Oliver Wendell Holmes" was made famous by two men: the poet and essayist and his son, the jurist. The former supreme court justice is shown here along with a photograph of the bust of his father at the Hall of Fame, New York University.

Each was a patriot, the father in song and inspiration, the son in deed. The poet wrote in his "Army Hymn": "Wake in our breast the living fires."

The holy faith that warmed our fires:
Thy hand hath made our nation free;
To die for her is serving Thee."

The son, answering Lincoln's call for volunteers, was wounded twice—at Ball's Bluff, Antietam and on Marye's Heights, at Fredericksburg, famous battlefields.

A Meeting in Wartime
The "like father, like son" aspect of the pair was illustrated after Antietam when Dr. Holmes tried to reach the bedside of his wounded son. Field hospitals, bare hospital camps, were searched vainly for two weeks. Then one day the elder Holmes was walking through a tree-train and a bedraggled soldier said quietly:

"How do you do, dad?"
"How do you do, son?" was the equally quiet reply.

Holmes the elder finished his and bombast. He drew his fur coat. "And when you stick on overcoat buttons."

Don't strew your pathway with those dreadful war."

And the son, in the midst of a solemn court argument, asked a ponderous-minded attorney some weighty questions in the lawyer's own language, capitulated the answers a moment and then convulsed the staid court with:

"That's going some!"

"Gems of Esquiline Diction"
Justice Holmes' decisions have been described as "gems of exquisite diction"; so, too, have his father's essays. Simplicity of expression, conciseness of statement and a humorous twist when wit would illumine the point characterize each.

The son, through all his court work, championed human rights when they came in conflict with vested interests. The father eloquently:

"The freeman, casting with usurped hand
The vote that shakes the turret of the land."

WEST SHOKAN
West Shokan, March 10.—Main street is taking on the aspect of Automobile Row, where flashing new models of 1934 parked in waiting attract the attention of many admiring though not covetous eyes. The splurge of prosperity is on the part of the group of Foresters sojourning at Idle Hour Cottage and among the Colange bungalows. Raymond Lake and Edward Murphy have Plymouth sedans purchased through the Van Kleeck agency of Kingston, and 'tis also rumored through a usually well informed source, that Charles Dunham, the astute young Shandaken lumberman, himself not an infrequent visitor at the Idle Hour, has placed an order for a Plymouth coupe. Clarence McCagg and Sam Kaseak, too, have placed orders and are waiting delivery for Plymouth creations, respectively, a coupe and sedan. Milton Gilbert chose the Chevrolet and 'tis certainly a much admired automobile of sedan type, radio equipped, and all. He purchased it through former Supervisor Chet Lyons of Ashokan, local distributor of this popular unit in the General Motors line. And now Mr. Gilbert highly elated with his selection, just keeps going places, and how Mr. and Mrs. Edmund C. Burgher and son, Robert, were entertained at dinner Wednesday evening at the apartments of former Judge and Mrs. Lester S. Davis of Main street. The group was later joined by Mr. and Mrs. George C. Brooks of Albany avenue, Kingston. Mr. Brooks is the well known manager of the Kingston branch of Parker McElroy Company, New York stock brokers. Forester Milton Gilbert, popular sojourner at Idle Hour Cottage of Main street, ill at this writing, is being cared for by the motherly hostess, Mrs. Van Demark.

Among recent sparks from the social world was the entertaining one night of Gladys Van Demark and her escort, Kinne Cole, also Raymond Fawcett, comely young mistress at High Point Springs Farm. Mrs. William Colange and children and Mrs. M. Stanak were pleasantly entertained one afternoon during the week at the home of Mrs. Lauren Hesley of Main street.

Among victims now recovered are Mr. and Mrs. John Davis of Ashokan, while Mrs. Earle North of Shokan is among others currently ill. Charles Blakelee of the Belleville C. C. Hollywood Prize-Fighters 'See Stars' As Film Luminaries Flock To Ringside

Washington Daybook

By MERRITT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON—If the democrats are concerned over criticism leveled at them because of cancellation of small contracts, they have managed so far to keep it well concealed.

Everyone from the President down apparently is undisturbed. Were there misgivings or alarm over the subject in administration circles it would have been quickly detected in Washington.

Observers here are quick to note when politicians are whistling to keep up their courage. They haven't heard a treble so far.

At Mr. Roosevelt's first press conference after the contracts had been canceled, he seemed not only willing but eager to discuss the question. The correspondents who crowded around his desk pumped him with query after query, all of which he answered with ease.

The first avalanche of criticism, including the telegram of Colonel Lindbergh, already had descended on his head at the time, too.

Senate Threat Fades

In the senate, where reactions to policy quickly find expression, democrats have found it scarcely necessary to make serious defense of the move.

Robinson of Indiana, a republican, did call attention to the charge made earlier by Representative Fish of New York that only one company had been spared and said that it had been suggested that company was a competitor to the democratic national campaign fund.

Black of Alabama, chairman of the senate committee investigating national contracts, promptly assured Robinson if he desired to submit any names "now or hereafter," it should be very glad indeed to summon them, notify the senator to be present, and I shall be very glad to ask the witness myself to what party he contributed, or permit that privilege to be given to the senator.

That's how sure of their ground they all seem to be.

Confidence in President

CRITICISM of the administration in this instance has been both widespread and vigorous. Perhaps not since the abandonment of the gold standard last May has a "new deal" move been so attacked.

The serenity and calm may be explained in two ways. The President believes he has the "kouda" on the small carriers, developed by the Black investigation, and can win his case in the courts. Also he and his whole administration feel that the country is with him in this controversy.

As expressed by Joe Robinson, democratic leader on the floor of the senate recently in reply to a republican jibe at the President: "I believe that the country has more confidence in Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States, than it has in any other one man or in any other one group of men in the United States."

COUNTY LEGION MEETS TO MEET WEDNESDAY

The Ulster county commander of the American Legion County organization, Edwin C. Curtis, has called a meeting of the Ulster County Committee to be held in the Kingston Post rooms on Wednesday, March 14, at 8 in the evening. It is desirable to have a full representation present.

Superstitions Concerning Death

All superstitions do not have the same origin. Some are of ancient origin. It is an Irish custom to cover mirrors so that the soul may not see itself and be frightened. Cloths are stepped so that the soul on its way to God may not be distracted.

Kids Live in High Place

Kids from the Indian come have been found at an altitude of 8,000 feet in rivers of the Congo valley, in Africa.

Ulster County's Rare Heritage

Ulster county cement had its big day and then it too in large measure passed out of the picture with the advent of Portland cement. Brick making is still carried on, but most of the big yards have suffered in recent years, with the increased use of cement, the pressure of foreign competition and the slump in the building trade.

D. & H. Canal.

The Delaware and Hudson canal, completed in 1828, came and went, its death spelling the practical doom of many small hamlets along its route and causing many business changes.

Then there is the story of the railroads—the West Shore, the Walkkill Valley, the Ulster and Delaware, the N. Y. Ontario & Western—and the developments that followed their construction.

Among outstanding changes as the years have passed has been the opening up of the Catskills and Shawangunk regions as great recreational centers and the establishment of resorts that have attained a national reputation, attracting thousands each recurring summer. Another event was the building of the great Ashokan dam, some details of which have lately been reviewed by The Freeman.

It is interesting to note, however, that in one of the things for which the Esopus country was particularly noted in the early days Ulster county still stands among the leaders—activities included under the general term, agriculture. Ulster county apples, berries and other fruits, its milk, butter, eggs and poultry, and other farm products, have, if anything, grown better and more famous with the passing of the years and today their superior excellence is recognized far and wide.

Ulster County Today.

Ulster county today contains 663,327 acres of land. The total equalized value of the real property in the county was fixed at $65,742,564 in 1932. Of this amount $19,575,174 was in the city of Kingston. The county is divided into 20 towns and the city of Kingston. Kingston was incorporated as a city in 1872. About the only addition to the family the moderns look forward to is the day their new car will arrive.

Judge: The traffic court—I'll let you off with a fine this time, but another day I'll send you to jail.
Driver:—What do you mean?
Judge:—What do you mean?
Driver:—Fine today—cooler tomorrow.

Two couples really should consider changing husbands and wives. One of the pairs had their car freeze in January. Each of the members thought the other had had alcohol put in it. The other's car was ready for 35 below zero because both took the precaution of having a lot of anti-freeze poured into the radiator of their car.

Man—I can't understand why they call this a pleasure car.
Neighbor—Why not?
Man—The blamed thing has given me nothing but trouble.

Buying a license to marry has one advantage over buying one for a car or a dog. You don't have to get a new license tags every year.

Son—Tomorrow is dad's birthday—what shall we do for him?
Daughter—We might let him have his car for a change.

Well, the American dollar has entered the low price field. We are wondering what the quotations on the 1935 models will be.

A good many people were expecting prosperity to start as quick as the motor oil fellows claim they'll start your car on a morning 40 below zero.

Knees for automobiles are now all the vogue. You can now get run over without the drivers even knowing they hit you.

Women are like reckless drivers, thinks a local man. One will never admit she's a day over twenty-nine—and the other will swear he wasn't going a mile over thirty.

Loose Screws, Nuts and Bolts. . . There is still too much confidence put in automobile brakes. . . Everybody on a political machine wants to blow the horn, and nobody wants to buy the gas. You can't tell. What is speeding now may be called blocking traffic in another hundred years. . . In every town there are two or three men so well to do they can afford not to own an automobile. . . When kissing a girl in an auto arrange matters so she is looking one way and you the other. . . A hick town is a place where the traffic cop nods and smiles as you pass by. . . It is getting so now that the person killed by an automobile dies a natural death. . . Putting your foot down doesn't necessarily show strength of character if it's on the accelerator. . . You can tell when you are on the wrong road. You miss the smell of hot dogs.

"Stop, look and listen." Is a good slogan in connection with railroad crossings, but the man who stops and looks at a pretty woman may have to listen to her later on.

Stung! You ask me why I look so sad? I met my neighbor's daughter—it isn't that I loved and lost. But that I loved and got her.

Demonstrations had some regard for his fellow men. When he filled his mouth with pebbles he spoke on the seashore instead of into a microphone.

Asker—Is there a simple remedy for sleeplessness?
Answer—Yes, one only need count up to 100.
Asker—Sounds very good, but our baby cannot count up to 100.

All things come to those who get tired of waiting and go after them.

The heir of a long line of Chinese emperors now sits on the throne of Manchukuo. That's what royalty is for—sit on thrones. It looks ornamental and does not do as much harm as it might if it were off, trying to get on.

Why marvel when a criminal escapes jail with a wooden pistol? Think what a lot of us accomplish with wooden heads.

The pen is mightier than the sword, and the "mike" is mightier than the big stick.

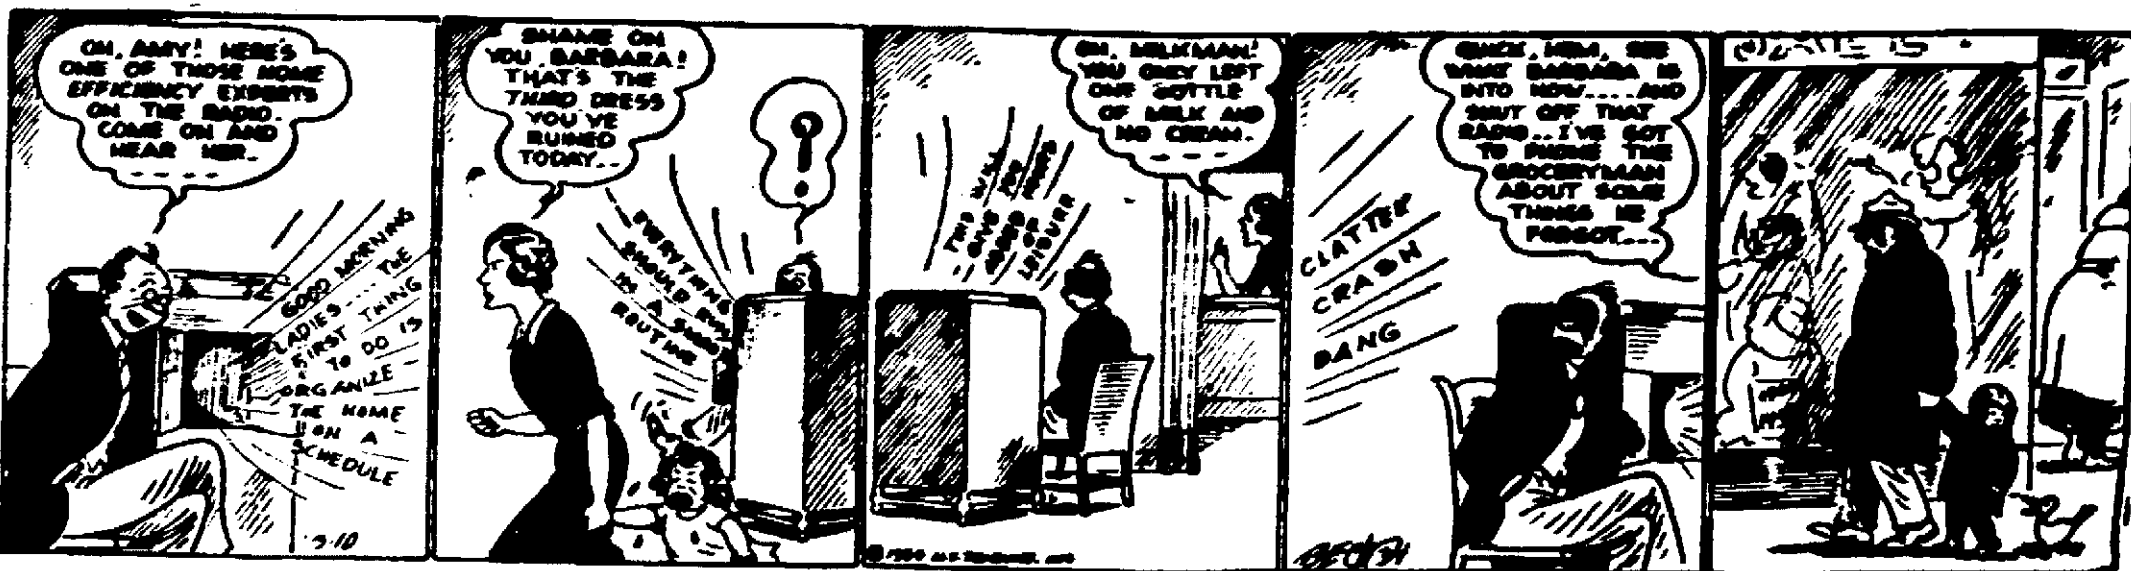

Now the woman sheriff is being razed because a desperado abused her hospitality and broke loose. Of course, no prisoner ever escaped from a jail run by a male sheriff. All we learn from this is not to let 'em whistle wooden guns.

Puffy leads with his left to the tiger's right eye.
The tiger acts groggy. He's faking.
He's a lie.
Puffy grows a bit careless. Look out for that!
He heads! and Puffy's out, like a bundle of straw.

Caught In the Nets of Fashion

Copyright, 1934, by Fairchild.

A tunic frock in pale blue rough crepe is effective for its back detail or ruffled revers faced with silver cloth and the big bow with long ends.
Perfect for Southern nights, at center, is this frothy frock of sea-foam green net made in tiered effect in layers and layers of the material with perky shoulder flares and skirt trailing at back.
The cotton frock registers again developed in a white dimity-like material printed in pale blue and green florals. Soft petal outlines the decollete and the hemline and forms a droop shoulder effect.
A black net frock has a port upstanding ruffled collar held by a band of gardenias at the throat and at the waistline. Over the bodice the net is in one thickness revealing a black camisole.

What a Difference a New Season Makes!

New York—Never was there a time when window shopping was such an adventure, or when fashion shows were more fun to watch than now. How do designers contrive to make old ideas look new and to keep pulling new tricks out of their hats season after season?

Just when you think everything has been done before and there can be nothing new, we suddenly see seashell used for buttons and birds and butterflies adding their brightness to elements heretofore foreign to them. We see new materials, so new that we are at a loss for a name for them, and colors that surely are lovelier than any done before. And yet, in spite of the fact that clothes look very different, when one tries to analyze them, it's difficult to tell just what makes them seem so.

It's pleasant to contemplate a season in which women are not all going to look alike. There are so many ways of wearing one's hat, not to mention so many hats, that it isn't at all likely one type will be singled out. Funny, you'll agree, to see these women who never, never, never were going to be anything but bobbed, wearing big fat braids across the top of their heads. Funny, too, this new traffic in false hair. A switch is a switch no matter how many new names hairdressers find for it. And those sausage-like curls, little cocktail sausage curls, on which these new, too-cute-for-words hats are balanced. Oh, yes, styles have changed all right and in no way is it more apparent than in hats.

There are, to begin with, the very shiny straws. There are also devastating bows and charming floral arrangements. There's the return to the yellowish straws, trimmed with black or color, and to independence instead of each hat meekly following the leader.

It's fine and dandy to know that skirts are way up for day wear and that we may wear trains for evening. It's comfortable to be back in short sleeves and cool-looking open collars. And just too exciting for words to have such an array of new prints and fabric novelties from which to choose, not to mention many ways of being windblown.

Paton Dresses a Princess Bride

A bridal gown from Jean Paton. The gown is developed in white georgette, with the veil in lace and tulle. The draped movement through the waistline and the built-up detail of the skirt are interesting features, as is the wide expression of the shoulders.

Jelly Bear's Gift

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER
"Why are you all down here?" asked Jelly Bear as he came lumbering down to the pond.

"Oh, we've been having a dreadful time," quacked the Ducks, and they told Jelly Bear what had happened.
"Then you'll be ready for my gift, Willy Nilly. Certainly you deserve it. I had been finding maple sap everywhere and it was indeed delicious. Then I thought I would wash my sticky paws in a stream, and not only did I do that! I found many good fish and had a fine meal and took some back to Honey Bear who was in the cave with Little Jupiter and Blacky Bear."

"But I brought along a great big fish as a present for you!"
"Well, well," exclaimed Willy Nilly. "If this isn't a surprise! And I do believe I am hungry too." He made a bounce and cooked the fish. It was simply delicious. Then Jelly Bear sat down and told stories his grandmother Bear had told him—stories she had heard from her grandmother who had heard them from another grandmother—of the days when the Indians lived in the land.

It grew dark as they sat around the hearth by the pond, and soon they pretended they were Indians too, whooping and shouting and running.

But then they sat down by the fire again and Mrs. Quack Duck handed a stick around that was very much like a pipe 'n' shape.
The pipe of peace, the pipe of happiness, quack, quack," she quacked, and all took it in turn. Then they all went to sleep and the embers of the fire kept them warm. Once again Paddy Haddock was peaceful.

Paris Transposes Formal Details To Lingerie

At extreme left is one of pale blue crepe de Chine adorned with intricate Turkish pattern. The decollete is rather high at front but low at back; the little pointed sleeves are held in place by bands over the shoulders.

Center is a gown of pink crepe satin, cut on the bias to mold the figure in princess style. Two large but not curved flowers hold a long narrow scarf of pink chiffon at front of the waistline, so that two ends lie heavily at back and two others curve to the shoulders where they fall in panels.

The third gown is of pink crepe de Chine, with satin flowers embroidered at the waistline, and beaded bands shaping the neckline and flaring the sleeve and encircling hem ruffles. Two big bows hold the gown.

The shoulder caplet fashion extended to bed-jackets, in a model of white-pink quilted pajamas, shown at upper right. Below, a gown with double cap sleeves of matching mesh, and distinctive collar made good as a skin on the front of the bodice.

Hamilton repeated that he was tired of it all.

Middletown, N. Y.—The city's W. A. was proud of its record of no accidents to workers. Yesterday 20 names were taken off the payroll. Michelle Civitarese failed to get the piece of dismissal, and showed up for work. He slipped and fell on an ice, inflicting a deep neck wound.

"Give us," said the pair, "your name."
"Indeed, I won't," she replied.
"Well then, let us have your car."
"All right," she answered, "it's insured."
Mrs. Ostrom reported her experience to the police after the robbers had driven away. One of the men carried a pistol.

He often throws away the pulp of such things as melons, and eats the seeds.

Epstein Objected.

Alderman Epstein after the vote was taken said he desired to call the attention of the laws and rules committee to what happened in the Dempsey administration when the city it was supposed to have set aside a certain amount for insurance purposes, but, according to Alderman Epstein, did not do so.

Alderman Leirey Explains.

Alderman Leirey who introduced the resolution said that his reason for sponsoring such a resolution to bring about self insurance for the city was that a thorough investigation by the laws and rules committee, prior to submitting the resolution and up to this time disclosed the fact that during 1932 it cost the board of public works $10,689.39 for compensation insurance.

During 1929-31, the city carried its own insurance. During these three years the city paid out in claims, on account of accidents, plus claims for those years paid in 1932 and 1933, the sum of $6,449.66. The city had carried compensation insurance he said, during those three years it would have cost the city $32,688.17, which would have gone to insurance companies. Therefore by being a self insurer for the three years in question a net saving was brought about to the extent of $25,618.51.

Past experience has proven that compensation insurance does not always protect the city from paying a compensation claim. At the February meeting, the Common Council authorized the settling of a compensation claim for the sum of $836.46 awarded an employee of the Emergency Relief Board. The city then carried compensation insurance for this employee with the Union Indemnity Company. The Union Indemnity Company had failed and was unable to meet its obligation in the payment of that sum and the city reimbursed said employee, even though it had been presumably protected by compensation insurance in said company.

Compensation insurance for this year was taken out on October 15, 1933; at the end of six months the cost to the taxpayers of the city is 60 per cent of the annual charge based upon payrolls up to this time. If this action is delayed, say another month, the cost will be 70 per cent; in other words, the longer the delay, the greater the cost to the taxpayers of the city.

Municipalities are not obliged to furnish bonds or security for the privilege of becoming self-insurers. The purpose of this resolution is to ask for permission from State Industrial Board to become a self-insuring community. This is necessary under Section 50, Workmen's Compensation Law. After permission has been secured and granted the city of Kingston can act accordingly.

"Only One Side of Picture"

Attorney Raymond Van Buren of the firm of Fessenden & Van Buren was given the privilege of the floor. He said that he had not intended to talk on the question of self insurance for the city, but had intended presenting the case of the insurance companies at the board meetings when the question came up. There was no question he said about whether the industrial commission would grant permission for the city to be a self insurer; the commission will.

Alderman Leirey said Mr. Van Buren had presented only one side of the picture and the insurance men should be given an opportunity of giving their side of the picture. The city carried insurance on the public schools and there had not been a school fire in years, but if one did occur the city was protected by an insurance company.

Motions and Resolutions.

The following resolutions were introduced and referred to the city departments:

Alderman Kelts—that board of public works fill in front of 39 Van Gaaubeek street to straighten up the roadway.

Alderman Rean—that new sewer be built in Henry street and street placed in proper shape as a CWA project.

Alderman Debeny—that McEneaney street from Hone to West Pierpont street be widened as a CWA project.

Alderman Leirey—that holes be filled in Moore street, Second avenue, Third avenue, High street, Larch street, Hooker street, Lincoln street to boundary of ward, Rondout street, Rock street, Ulster street and Kingston street; that all water hydrants in Fourth ward be flushed.

Other matters taken up will be found elsewhere.

Taylor Lost Action to Recover on Insurance Policy For Disability

Veteran Sought to Recover on $5,000 Policy—Insurance Company Claimed Taylor Was Treated for Illness Before Taking Policy.

George H. Taylor of Ellenville lost his action in supreme court against the Prudential Insurance Company of America, an action brought to recover under a $5,000 policy for alleged permanent disability. The jurors found a verdict of no cause of action in the case and answered eight special questions submitted in favor of the insurance company. These questions related to whether he was in good physical condition at the time of taking out the insurance policy and whether he had been previously treated by physicians for a serious illness during the three years prior to the taking out of the policy and also as to whether he had made false statements in his application for insurance.

The jury found that he had not been in good health on August 23, 1929, the date involved in the issue, that he had been attended by a physician within three years prior to taking out the policy, that he had suffered serious illness before August 23, 1929, and that he had had medical and hospital treatment previous to August 23, 1929, that he had suffered dizziness prior to that date and that statements made on his application for insurance had not been correct.

The case was a most unusual one. Mr. Taylor served his country in a most commendable manner during the World War as a member of the famous Third Division. He saw much service but fortunately escaped being wounded, however he contends that this service did injure his health. His present trouble is caused by nerve injury. After the war he engaged in his business as a printer and publisher and worked long hours. His health gave way first by a general weakening of his entire system but he continued to work until forced by extreme weakness to give up work. Treatments in hospitals followed and his condition became worse until at the present time he is unable to walk and has lost use of his legs through this serious nerve condition, the cause of which medical science cannot determine. Physicians describe it as a lack of nourishment of the nerves.

Made Application.
He made application to the Veterans' Bureau for a pension on account of service connected disability and this has been denied. However the government did grant a small pension for disability not service connected.

Mr. Taylor applied for insurance and the company doctor examined him and passed him and the policy was written. However in less than two years he began to suffer from the present illness and made a claim to the company for permanent disability aid. The company questioned this and the action was brought to recover. The policy contained the usual two year clause as to incontestability. Had the claim been filed two months later and the action been commenced after the two year period had expired the company would have had no grounds to contest the matter.

In order to introduce certain records from the Veterans' Bureau it was necessary for the counsel for defendant company to go to the supreme court and get an order to examine records. This was denied by supreme court and an appeal was taken to the appellate division and a reversal of the lower court was granted and even then the bureau did not choose to recognize the order which had been obtained on the grounds that examination of the government records was desired to prevent a fraud. This theory finally prevailed and the government records were opened and presented in court on trial.

The company's contention was that Mr. Taylor had suffered illness prior to making application for insurance and that he had been treated in hospitals and by doctors within three years prior to the writing of the insurance and that he had failed to so inform the company when he made application for insurance.

Unusual Situation.
The entire case presented many unusual situations and throughout the trial a number of attorneys remained in court to hear the evidence and rulings of the court.

When the verdict was returned LeRoy Lounsbury for Plaintiff, moved to set aside the verdict on the grounds that it was against the law and the evidence and he asked for a new trial. Motion denied. Judge Adel said: "I do not see how the jury could find otherwise, your verdict is a just and true one."

Following the submission of the Taylor-Prudential case two actions brought by Abram Handler and Benjamin Carpenter against The Automobile Insurance Company of Hartford, Conn., and The Home Insurance Company and the High View Hotel Company, Inc., were taken up for trial with a jury. The actions were to recover on insurance policies. Handler holds a second mortgage on the High View Hotel property and Carpenter holds a first mortgage. They seek to recover the amount of their individual holdings from the money due on insurance following a fire at the hotel on November 8, 1932. There were two policies of $2,500 each.

Carpenter, who lives at Ellenville, holds a mortgage for $2,100 and interest, a total to date of $2,328.01. Handler holds a second mortgage amounting to $5,027.72 and interest. The insurance company contested the matter on the grounds that the owner, Benjamin Levine, had not properly stated the number of rooms in the house at the time of taking out insurance. The policy called for 29 guest rooms while Mr. Levine on the stand testified that there were 41 guest rooms. The company tried to show that had the company known the number of rooms to be 41 the rate would have been higher.

After evidence had been submitted counsel agreed that the question involved was one of law and the jurors were dismissed and Judge Adel reserved decision in the matter. Francis T. Murray and Andrew J. Cook appeared for plaintiffs and Frank N. Crosby appeared for defendant company. LeRoy Lounsbury appeared for Mr. Carpenter, holder of the first mortgage.

At the conclusion of the testimony Mr. Lounsbury moved for judgment for Mr. Carpenter in the sum of $1,164 from each of the two insurance companies and Mr. Murray moved for judgment for Handler in the sum of $1,750 from each of the two companies, the total amount of the insurance carried in the two companies. Mr. Carpenter as holder of the first mortgage asked for full amount of the money due under the policies was asked by Mr. Handler. Decision reserved.

Court recessed until 11 o'clock Monday morning.

The Swing in the Apple Orchard

By ANNE CAMPBELL

THE swing in the apple orchard was loveliest in spring. We swayed in the dewy morning when trees were blossoming. Our aim was to reach the fragrance of the highest bloom of all. The birds in their brown nests trembled. We heard their mother call.

The swing in the apple orchard, When summer shed its gold, Was drenched with a leafy splendor That was regal to behold. We saw, as the apples ripened, The silver hand of Time. His shadow across the orchard Plucked apples in their prime.

The swing of the apple orchard In autumn, brown and serene, Was shrouded by the busy children, For the school bell sounded clear. The swing was a teasing ribbon Until the end of May, And it hangs now in my remembrance, The ghost of a bygone day! (Copyright, 1934, WNCN Service.)

Financial and Commercial

New York, March 10. (AP)—Although some of the metals and a few specialties attained a small degree of popularity in today's stock market, leading issues were extremely listless and prices generally narrow.

It was one of the duller sessions since early in January. Transfers approximated $50,000 shares. The close was moderately irregular.

Market observers attributed the lack of enthusiasm for most equities largely to the inability of Wall Street to determine just what sort of a federal control measure will pass congress; to nervousness over labor situations which, although static for the moment, are still being watched closely; and the NRA campaign for shorter working hours and higher wages.

All things considered, neither the public nor so-called professionals showed much inclination to jump in on the buying side while the various problems are pending at Washington. There was a tendency to ignore bright business and industrial news.

Wheat rallied about a cent a bushel around mid-day, but cotton again pointed downward. Silver and rubber futures were fairly steady. International dollar rates continued to fluctuate in small fractions. Bonds were a little mixed.

Shares of U. S. Smelting got up more than 2 points and advances of a point or more were recorded by McIntyre, American Smelting, Cerro de Pasco, American Metals and Howland Sound. Canadian stocks improved and gains of about a point were held by Case, Western Union, U. S. Rubber and Atlas Tack. General Motors was up a trifle, but Chrysler held flat. The rails and utilities were hesitant. National Distillers, American Commercial Alcohol and U. S. Industrial Alcohol dropped a point or more each. The tobacco also sagged.

Alumni Play Got Praise of Audience

"Holiday," directed by Miss Ann E. Herzog, proved to be a smashing success. The play, which was presented by the Alumni Association, was well received by the audience.

A large and enthusiastic audience gathered at the Kingston High School Auditorium Friday evening to see "Holiday," by Philip Barry. Given by members of the K. H. S. Alumni Association, and entirely discredited was the old proverb, "A prophet without honor in his own country," as far as the director of the play, Miss Ann E. Herzog, was concerned, for she was showered with well earned congratulations over the successful performance of the first play that she has "produced" since her return to her home city.

The play chosen was remarkable for its showing of present day life. It was human, quite too human to be either historic or modernistic. While listed as a "comedy in three acts," it was not all comedy by any means, sometimes bordering on the tragic, and was full of mental riddles for the older folks in the audience. At all times it was entertaining and wit and humor abounded.

The story in brief was that of a family of the rich, a visionless father (Edward Seton), a charming society girl, the older daughter (Julia Seton), a younger daughter (Linda Seton), a rebellious son having had everything thrust upon her in life so that adventure was out of her realm; a good natured son (Ned Seton) who drank because he had not Linda's courage to kick against the circumstances which tied him. Then there was set against this family (Johnny Case), who was free of all such circumscribing, having fought his own way in life since he was ten years old, and who sweetly but positively and thoughtfully intended to go on living so that he might know the most of life and get all it had to give while he was yet young, in fact, have his "Holiday."

Helping to lighten the play and make sure three acts of comedy were the friends of the Setons and the Setons' servants: Susan and Nick Potter, Laura and Seton Cram, the two men who adroitly "battled" Henry, Charles and Della, the maid. Not aware of the riches of the Setons, Johnny Case fell in love with Julia Seton, and discovered the money involved later, but had the temerity to think that Julia would understand his wish for all of life to be found by youth, which meant just enough money to do a few things before going back to real work. The father, even Julia and Johnny's idea but Linda did not grasp was much of fine fun and entertainment in that part of the play in which Johnny finally won, Julia regained her social freedom and Linda and Johnny found each other and helped Ned to find a remnant of himself, with all of the other actors as very clever "accessories" before the "crime."

Looking over the cast the audience found several old favorites of past high school dramatic successes, and before they went home they had become acquainted with new favorites well talented.

Being as frank as the play itself, we will say that the new, first magnitude star on last evening's dramatic horizon was N. James Fowler, who was still the Jansen Fowler of hosts of friends, and who for the evening found himself born Johnny Case. So it happened that Johnny Case was a chap of lovable personality, perfectly sincere, whimsical, unabashed and one who honored sentiment and had no use for affectations. Little wonder that Linda Seton found in him a real man to whom she felt without quibble or reservation social custom, when her sister Julia freed her unconventional lover.

Frances Flinn as Linda Seton and Marion Byrne as Julia Seton shared honors, each playing their widely divergent parts with subtle characterization. There was the dignity of tragedy in much of Miss Flinn's acting, but not too much. Eltinge Thiney had the unpoplar part of father Seton and must have had a pretty good idea of how such folks think and act, for he portrayed the character admirably.

Peter Minasian made the audience apologetically quite fond of Ned Seton, the son with a wine glass always in his hand, but more sense than was to be expected in his head. The high light of wit, wise cracks, fundamental sense and a right value of sincere human love, were turned on to the play illuminatingly by Henry Osterhout, as Nick Potter and June S. Mac Fadden as his wife, Susan Potter.

The rather unpoplar character of two of their "social set" Laura Cram (Carolyn Port) and Seton Cram (George Teller) were well played and had considerable dramatic value in the play.

George Betts as "Henry," Lewis B. Stokette as "Charles" and Ann O'Meara as "Della" the maid, added their parts excellently.

As is the case with a good play well played, the audience was reluctant to say "good night" to the "Holiday" party with whom they had spent such an enjoyable, and in some instances, unforgettable evening.

Between Act II and Act III, Samuel Jacobs, who gave up a part in the play to help Miss Herzog out in other ways, took the audience into his confidence and told them of some of the difficulties encountered in presenting the play, all of which had been cheerfully overcome by the patience and indomitable personality of Miss Herzog who had won the admiration and love of all who had the privilege of working with her in Union Pacific R. R.

Two days before its presentation, Leo Norman, who was to take the part of Nick Potter, was obliged to step out of the picture on account of the critical illness of his mother, and Henry Osterhout, who was to take the part of Ned Seton, was obliged to step out of the picture on account of the critical illness of his mother, and Henry Osterhout, who was to take the part of Ned Seton, was obliged to step out of the picture on account of the critical illness of his mother.

The play was given, Mr. Jacobs thanked all who had in any way contributed toward the success of the play, the audience especially. Their support would mean the beginning of a fund for the erection of an athletic stadium, a much needed feature of Kingston High School today. Miss Herzog was then called before the curtain and warmly thanked for her skilled and gracious efforts and was also presented by Mr. Jacobs, on behalf of the cast, with a copy of "Anthony Adams" C.K.R.

WHY There Is No Sand Used in the Making of Sandpaper

Familiar as sandpaper is to practically everybody, yet there are very few persons indeed, who know that this universally used product has no sand in it. It is estimated that half of the population of the United States, more than sixty million people, use sandpaper from time to time.

But of these many millions how many ever give a thought to what constitutes the abrasive surface of sandpaper, which is used in the manufacture of nearly everything man uses in his lifetime from the cradle to the casket?

Sand cannot be used for making sandpaper because it is not efficient for that purpose, for most sand is waterworn and the particles are therefore more or less rounded and have no sharp cutting edge.

The abrasive particles on sandpaper are specially crushed flint or garnet or are products of the electric furnace, aluminum oxide or silicon carbide.

The abrasive particles used in the manufacture of sandpaper, with a few exceptions, are not true crystals, nor are they alike. The particles, though carefully graded, vary in size and shape and have many edges and points, some of which are much sharper than others. Best results are obtained from grits approximately twice as long as they are wide.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Why Color of Sea Water Is Affected by Depths
Sea water itself is rather transparent. Since different hues have their own depths of penetration, thickness of water can account for color. For this reason deep sea water is green because light of this color travels farthest, according to the University of California Scripps Institution of Oceanography.

Sea water, it is said, can scatter, transmit, reflect or absorb daylight, and the colors observed result from one or more of these actions. Frequently colors such as green, brown or red are wrongly attributed to the water when actually they are due to floating organisms or suspended matter.

One-third of daylight, it is explained, is seized by the earth's atmosphere, another third, the invisible infra-red and ultra-violet, is absorbed by the sea surface, while the last third has its speed checked by the water, and is stopped part by part according to color at different depths. Each absorbed part of sunshine, after having served its purpose, is transformed into heat, with no possibility of ever again being visible.

Why "t" is "Terrorous" System
The "Torrens" system of title registration was devised by Sir Robert Torrens in 1857 in Australia. The system consists of a bureau of registration in charge of a registrar. A title may be registered either as absolute or as possessory. Before registry, the title is fully investigated by the registrar, old title deeds, claims, etc., being exhaustively studied. When satisfied, the registrar files all the documentary proof and issues to the holder of the title a certificate of ownership, a duplicate of which is in the office of the registrar. Such certificates bear on their face, notice of all incumbrances, etc., of the property. If the subject to reversion, or limitation of time, or inheritance, the title is called possessory. An insurance fund is created to indemnify any holders of the "Torrens" titles from loss. This is financed by a tax of 1/4 per cent of the value of the land at the time of the issuance of the first certificate.

Today.

Kingston: "Moulin Rouge" seems that most of the lady stars find it necessary to derive the delights of musical comedy, so here we find Constance Bennett, always billed as a sophisticated and austere actress, doing her stuff in song and rhythm, against a background of dance sets, chorus beauties and radio stars. Strange as it seems, Miss Bennett is at her very best in this musical romance, in fact she has never made a better picture. The plot concerns a stage-struck wife, who impersonates a famous French actress, and goes places by doing so. Her husband gets all mixed up with this dual personality, and his life is one long haze of honest and understandable bewilderment. Wearing gorgeous clothes, Constance Bennett dominates the show with an exceptional performance, but Franchot Tone, Russ Columbo, Tullio Carminati, and the Boswell Sisters all get their share of glory. There are some rare dance scenes in this show, as well as some excellent songs and singing.

Orpheum: "The Invisible Man." The imagination of H. G. Wells is the reason for this thriller. A chemist, messing around with formulae, discovers the blending of certain potent chemicals is capable of making the human body invisible. He avails himself of this, and becomes invisible. Speech is there, sight is there, feeling is there, but when he dresses, before the camera, he places his clothes over nothing but the atmosphere. In this state he discovers he is unable to bring himself back to visibility, so he goes partly insane. He decides he will rule the world, kill off his enemies and be a dreaded, invisible power on earth. The police decide to capture and kill him, and the search for this living, unseen human being is one of the maddest chases in movie history. Gloria Stuart, Claude Rains, Dudley Digges, Henry Travers and William Harrigan are in the cast.

Broadway: "Vaudeville" and "Three-Cornered Moon." Four special acts of vaudeville are offered on the Broadway stage, headed by "Marie and Paul," a miniature door circus treat; "Richard Castle and Ray," a dance presentation; and the comedy offering of "Parker Wynn and Company." One other act, as yet unannounced, completes the program. "Three-Cornered Moon," with Richard Arlen, Claudette Colbert, Mary Boland, Hardie Albright, Lyda Roberti, Joan Marsh, Tom Brown, William Bakewell and Wallace Ford tells in an interesting and delightful manner the story of a mighty woman who invests and loses the family fortune. She can't understand why her finances are at 60 on an abb, and she is rather dazed by the swift descent from riches to poverty. What should be a tragedy, turns out to be one of the laugh riots of the year because of the manner in which this play is directed and acted. The children get jobs, people fall in love, everything is lumpy-turky, but everyone has fun. Good entertainment.

Tomorrow: Orpheum: "Mr. Skitch." Will Rogers, humorist and radio star, in a story about a disappointed family who hike out for the west in the family auto. What happens on this journey to California proves comical entertainment. The daughter saves the day by marrying a wealthy suitor. Mr. Rogers is given full opportunity to slide in his comments about general conditions, and to gently pan what he things wrong with this and that. Zasu Pitts is also in the cast. Florence Desmond walks away with the show, however, when she impersonates several well-known movie stars. Taken as a whole, this talk is worth seeing and Will Rogers' fans will find it one of his best.

Broadway: "This Day and Age" and "Song of Songs." Cecil B. DeMille grabs himself a brand new idea in the first offering, and turns it into a thought-provoking drama. The police in a certain city are unable to eradicate the gangster, so a group of young boys take it upon themselves to clean up the city, and they do a good job before they finish. Powerful drama is this exposure of lawlessness and police inefficiency. Even the shyest lawyer with his legal tricks is brought into the story. Charles Rickford, Richard Cromwell, Judith Allen and Eddie Nugent are in the strong cast. "Song of Songs" with Marlene Dietrich is one of those passion stories about an artist's model, and what an inspiration she is to the young, struggling, handsome artist. He later deserts her, and she marries wealth and nobility, but isn't happy. Brian Aherne and Lionel Atwill are featured.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

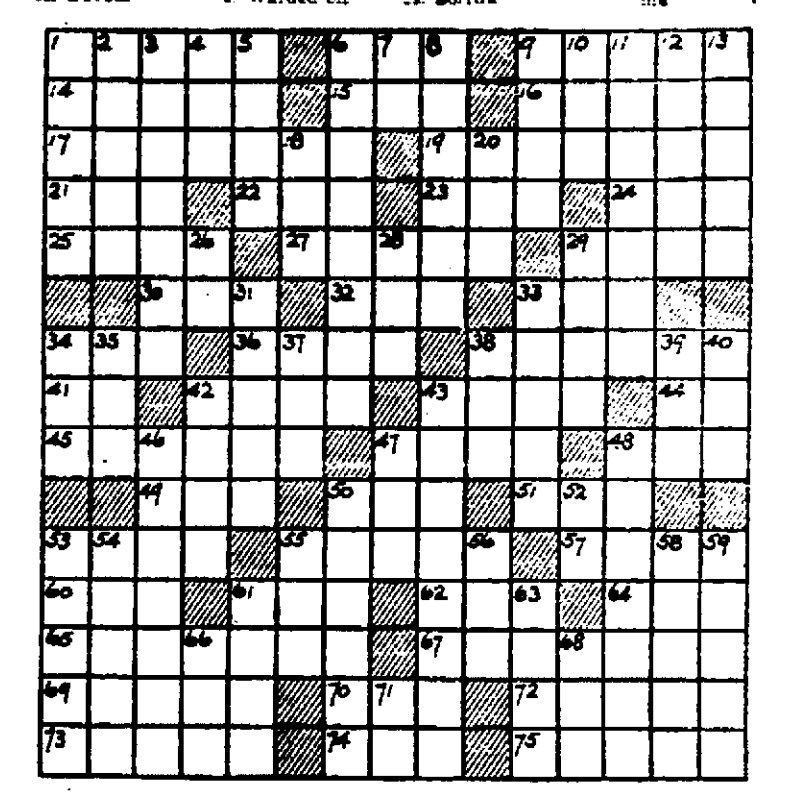

By ROSS COONS
HOLLYWOOD: Telling a "different" sort of story, "I Believed in You," introduces Rosemary Ames of Chicago to the screen and presents John Boles and Victor Jory in two outstanding characterizations. Miss Ames, an intense young person who at times resembles Marlene Dietrich without the German star's ingrained type of beauty, seems happily cast as the sheltered girl who knows nothing of life in the world but wants to write about it. Victor Jory is a labor agitator who takes her into his "Big Outside World" of Greenwich Village, where she meets an "Artist," a "Poet," a "Dancer," all of whom profess yearnings to do "Big Things" if only they had a chance. True Merrill (Miss Ames) is a dreamer herself, with limitless faith. She believes in them.

They Get A Chance
It is Michael Harrison (John Boles), a millionaire who uses his money in rather eccentric ways, who introduces her to another type of artist-people who do things without talking about them all the time. He strikes a bargain with True, seeking to disillusion her. He will finance her friends for six months, give them that "chance" they talk about. The result, nearly tragic, makes for strong dramatic conflict.

Parisian Bar
The screen's most prodigious example of that to which Earl Carroll recently referred as the killer of stage spectacle is offered in "Wonder Bar," all-star film in which Al Jolson has more to do than any other player. Dance Director Busby Berkeley tops previous conceptions with two numbers supposedly presented in a night club in Paris. If they were, the club is one of those intimate gathering places whose walls encompass a great part of Europe and considerable of the skies. Not content with the limitations of sound stages, Berkeley used mirrors to multiply into thousands his paltry hundreds of chorus people. Jolson is proprietor of the "Wonder Bar" in which these spectacles are offered between plot developments that involve Dolores Del Rio, Kay Francis, Ricardo Cortez and himself, while Dick Powell croons, Hal Leroy dances, and Guy Kibbee, Ruth Donnelly, Hugh Herbert, Louise Fazenda, Fifi Dorsay and Merna Kennedy on the sidelines supply comedy. Jolson wisecracks, smiles through tears at the end but altogether is less sentimental than in past films.

Kingfish Levinsky Humbled by Neusel, Title Chance Fades

Chicago Battle Looms More Promising in Fading to Whip Gorman After Flooding Him—Foul Tactics Help Lead for the King.

By HERBERT W. BARKER (Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, March 19 (AP)—It was not elsewhere than at King Levinsky for a suitable opponent to meet Heavyweight Champion Primo Carnera in the summer.

The Kingfish from Chicago, picked for a build-up campaign by the Garretts, after coming to New York, failed, dropped a decision to blonde Walter Neusel of Germany in ten rounds last night and talk of matching him with big Primo died down to a virtual whisper.

The King had lost plenty of prestige in his last previous start here although he won a disputed decision over Charley Massera of Pittsburgh. He lost plenty more last night when he put Neusel on the floor in the second stanza and then not only failed to keep him there but let the German carry off a split verdict with a strong finish.

Neusel down in second. Through the first six rounds Levinsky held the upper hand, flooring the German for a count of three with an overhead right to the chin in the second stanza and staggering him several times later. But from then on Levinsky faded in the face for Neusel's two-fisted body attack and at the finish the young Teuton, undefeated in this country, was driving his toe before him steadily.

It was a close decision, decided in Neusel's favor by the referee, Arthur Donovan, after one judge, Harold Barnes, had voted for Levinsky, and the other, Marty Monroe, for the German. The Chicagoan's foul tactics—hitting on the break, heeling and roughing—counted heavily against him.

One of the largest boxing crowds here in many months, 10,000 paid about $21,000 to see the exciting battle. Levinsky weighed 203½ pounds; Neusel 196½.

Tilden and Vines Trip French Again

St. Louis, March 10, (AP)—Big Bill Tilden and Ellsworth Vines today have added three more victories to their growing cluster over their French professional tennis rivals, Henri Cochet and Martin Plaa.

The 41-year-old Tilden found Plaa a stubborn opponent at the arena here last night, but triumphed after two hours, 6-4, 1-6, 7-5, 7-9, 7-5. Vines had little trouble with Cochet, winning, 6-3, 4-6, 6-0, 6-2. Erratic play cost the tall Californian the second set.

The doubles match was a walk-away for the Americans, who won, 6-1, 6-4. Vines playing most of the court while Tilden smiled approvingly.

Tonight Tilden meets Cochet and Vines opposes Plaa.

Last night's attendance was 1,840 and receipts $2,659.

Borotra, Shields and Mangin Favorites

New York, March 16 (AP)—Jean Borotra of France and Frank Shields and Gregory S. Mangin of the United States ruled co-favorites for the National Indoor Tennis championships opening today in the Seventh Regiment Armory.

Shields gave the home-bred something to cheer about yesterday when he whipped Borotra, 5-7, 9-7, 6-4 in the feature match of a series between the international clubs of France and the United States.

In addition to Shields, No. 1, and Mangin, No. 3, three other American "first ten" stars have entered the championships—Lester Stiefen of Los Angeles, No. 2; Sidney R. Wood, No. 6, and George Lott, No. 10.

The first wrist watch ordered by the Emperor Joseph for the marriage of his son in 1897, occupies a place of honor in an exhibition at La Chaux-de-Fonds, Switzerland.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN J. GOULD (Associated Press Sports Editor)

This is the season of the year when a great number of eager and ambitious young men answer a migratory call that is peculiarly American. They depart with the cheers and encouragement of home-town friends ringing in their ears. They come for the most part, from obscure and scattered parts. Some must explore the intricacies of life on a sleeping car for the first time as they head for the great adventure.

They are the regiment of rookies, recruited by a vast and complicated system known as organized baseball. Those headed for the major league camps, whether for the first time or not, have high hopes, of course. The chances are about one out of 10 that they will stick in the big show for even part of the season but they have an even opportunity to land in class "A" or "AA" company for further seasoning.

The system of selecting young talent nowadays is such that few reach the big league camp without real testing or experience beforehand, or a high recommendation from some scout. Major league baseball has its far-flung system now to develop younger players in classes of play befitting their various abilities as well as to keep a bigger number employed within the control of the headquarters organization.

Thus, for example, an organization such as that of the St. Louis Cardinals always has a supply of talent moving up or down, according to the needs and requirements of the various clubs or "chain stores." Two Class "AA" teams, at Columbus, O., and Rochester, N. Y., serve as a springboard for promotion to the big league or as receptacles for the surplus and fading forces of the main army. It is an ideal arrangement for young and old, magnate and rookie.

What Rookie Thinks About

What does a youngster think about, heading for the big spring roundup? If he is making the trip for the first time, he is probably a bit cockier than the boy who has been through the mill at least once and found out that, after all, he didn't learn all the tricks there were to the pitching craft back in Peoria or Kalamazoo.

On the way to Florida with the advance guard of young Giant hopefuls, boys with a chance to make good or at least mingle with world champions for the time being, I put the question to John Salverson. John has just turned 20 but he has already spent two springs with the Giants, due to the fact that they were training in California near his home town of Long Beach. He is a right-handed pitcher with sufficient promise to prompt Manager Bill Terry to keep a sharp eye on his progress and development.

"All you can say for me is that I'm just plumb lucky," remarked this tall, curly-haired youngster. "It's always been my ambition to play professional baseball but I never thought I would get the chance so soon or with club like the Giants. I got a thrill just being allowed to sit on the bench during that world series last year. Probably I'll be on my way back to the Texas league or some other spot soon but I'm young and I'm in this thing."

Salverson, say the insiders, is one of a great crop of youngsters who will help keep the Giants up around the top for some time to come.

Lower One-Wit Game?

Speaking of the Texas league reminded Salverson that he experienced the rare misfortune of losing a one-hit game down there last season, 1 to 0.

"I was pitching for Dallas against Bivins of Tulsa," he said. "And the funny part of the story is that the one hit I allowed didn't figure in the one run scored against us. A walk and a sacrifice put a man on second, then our second baseman juggled a grounder and threw too late to first to catch him. Our first catcher, Zeke Bonura, gave the umpire an argument over the decision and meanwhile the runner who had been on second scored home. We only got four hits off Bonura."

Two Advantages For American Racquetball

Philadelphia, March 10 (AP)—R. Norris Williams, captain of the 1934 United States Davis Cup team, says the American tennis players will have two advantages this year which they lacked in the past—playing on grass and being the "underdog."

Williams, who has been captain five times in the past, said last year he believed the American players were not aggressive enough. Now he expresses optimism.

"One advantage the United States players will have this year, as compared with other years, is that they will be the underdogs," he said. "The fact that they will be played on grass is another advantage. The majority of our players are best on grass."

If victorious in this country, the Cup team will be under the complete charge of Williams abroad, whatever happens. Saying he felt he could handle an emergency better than executive 2,000 miles away, the veteran made full authority a condition of his acceptance.

Williams also revealed that Big Bill Tilden and Ellsworth Vines, as well as other great amateurs of the past, are to be asked to play with the team.

Wants Action on Boulevard Now

March 9, 1934.
To the Editor Kingston Daily Freeman, Kingston, N. Y.

Dear Sir:
It is greatly incomprehensible not only to me, but also to many, why a road number of merchants of Kingston, who depend much for their business upon people residing within a reasonable radius of Kingston from where use of the Boulevard must be made as a means of approach by automobiles to business sections of Kingston, do not get together to make arrangements for a mass meeting where to discuss plans regarding a quick and actual completion of the work contemplated to be done towards the construction of the Boulevard.

The Boulevard is getting to be almost impassable and the undesirable loss of business results will be greatly evidenced by many merchants. In that there are many people who value their cars, which they consider as a most essential means of quick and convenient transportation according to the present day convenience, more than either a pleasure ride of a part necessarily shopping. The condition of the Boulevard, as is, may not be under stood to be a great detriment to business in Kingston, but insofar as my opinion is concerned, it means to be such.

I should think that something ought to be done towards bringing about a quick completion of the construction and thereby bring about a business betterment and also win over, in part, the good will of voters. I sincerely regret that I have to drive over the Boulevard a few times daily, not only because of its rugged condition but also because it has caused the breaking of three springs of my car.

Respectfully yours,
B. SALERNO.

YANKEE SEAMEN WAR ON CHINESE PRACY

Command Fleet to Stop Preying on Shipping.

San Francisco.—American merchant marine officers are in command of a fleet of swift and deadly craft of the submarine-chaser type with which the Navy government of China is endeavoring to wipe out the piracy rampant in its inland waters and the China sea. British officers are also employed.

This was revealed here by T. W. Joyce, who resigned as an officer aboard the S. S. General Pershing to take command of one of the 26 Chinese pirate-chasers.

Boldly raiding ships of all nations, the pirates have seized more than $15,000,000 in the last ten years and have sent insurance rates soaring.

Have Chinese Crews.
So perilous has it become to travel the China sea that American and other foreign vessels passing through are required to travel "All's well" every hour to warships stationed in those waters.

The pirate-chasers, manned by Orientals and especially trained crews of Chinese marines, will operate chiefly in the region between Amoy and Hongkong, where marauding pirates plunder foreign vessels, murdering passengers and officers indiscriminately, almost daily.

A mysterious half-caste woman, Joyce said he had learned, is the leader of the most desperate pirate gang, which operates principally in the Byas Bay region. The Navy government has offered a reward of $1,000 "Mex" for this reputedly ruthless female pirate captain, dead or alive. No time is lost by the authorities when they capture the marauders. They are beheaded without trial.

Cripple Craft.
Three or four confederates are placed aboard an outgoing vessel that has been marked by the pirates for a raid. During the night, if there is no sign of armed resistance, a message is flashed to the pirate junk sailing nearby. The junk, manned by approximately 40 cut-throat bandits of the sea, sails closer. The confederates aboard ship proceed to slash the bridge officers' throats and overpower the bridge officers. The pirates then board the ship, loot the cargo, rob the passengers and at the slightest sign of resistance slaughter them. As a parting shot, the engines are demolished and the vessel left at the mercy of the typhoons that sweep the China sea.

If any passenger is deemed wealthy, he is kidnapped and held for ransom. The pirates make for shore with their loot and with their victims, if any have been kidnapped, and take to the hills. Due to the inaccessibility of their hideouts, the government has been unsuccessful in ferreting them out.

The fast ship-chasers are equipped with machine guns and three-pound cannons.

Epsom Salts Likely to Be Base of New Autos

London.—Rubber glass, roads made from cotton, and airplanes and autos constructed from Epsom salts are possibilities of the near future.

A recent invention of scientists of the department of industrial and scientific research is a transparent, elastic resin "as resilient as rubber and as clear as glass."

A material lighter than aluminum, for use in transport vehicles, long has been the aim of research workers. It has been found in magnesium, which is guarded against corrosion by the use of a waste product from the electrolysis of copper. A feasible way of manufacturing this is from magnesium sulphate, or Epsom salts.

There is still a considerable amount of waste in the cotton industry, and the investigators are now working on a method for incorporating this waste in the making of roads.

Pigmy Tribe May Once Have Lived in Texas

Wellington, Texas.—Miniature bones found in a cliff on a ranch near here have led County Surveyor A. B. Smith to believe that part of the Texas panhandle was once inhabited by a pigmy tribe.

The small skeleton, found in a sitting posture, faced the east. The teeth in a tiny skull led Smith to believe the person must have died near the age of sixty. The skeleton was fairly well preserved by hard red clay surrounding it.

Historic Chain Presented

Souls of Sailors Return to Paimpol

Town folk here have long loved ones at sea who the pilots, believing that sailors' souls come back to rest in Paimpol cemetery each All Saints' eve.

10 Hamilton St., Cohoes, N. Y. Kingston Daily Freeman, Kingston, N. Y.

Dear Sir: Please through your newspaper help to locate Mrs. Dora Marie Hamilton, who left Cohoes, N. Y., Friday, February 9, and is believed to be working in or near Kingston, N. Y. A description has been broadcast from Station WOKO at Albany but since then she has dropped a card from Kingston, N. Y., saying how she was working near there. Her description is as follows: Age 26 years, 5 ft. 6 in., weight 135 pounds, dark brown hair, dark brown eyes, dark complexion, very attractive.

She does restaurant work such as waitress, is believed to be working in a restaurant or for some private family as cook or housekeeper, etc. She always uses the name Marie Hamilton.

Thanking you in advance, also enclosing a three cent stamp for a copy of your paper that this may appear in.

Colonel Meagher Receives Word That Quota Move For The Citizens Military Training Corps Has Been Filled.

Colonel Frank L. Meagher, Ulster county chairman of the Citizens Military Training Corps, has received word that 15 applications have been received from Ulster county filling the local quota for the C. M. T. C.

In the enrollment and examinations, Colonel Meagher was assisted by Captains Fred Stain, E. F. Diehl, M. C. retired, Sargent; Captain E. Sanford, M. C. Ret., Kingston; Lieut. E. F. Galvin, M. C. Ret., Rosendale; Lieut. A. C. Gervais, M. C. Ret., Milton; Lieut. C. C. Zachary, M. C. Ret., Marlborough.

The following letters announcing that the quota here had been filled were received by the chairman:

Headquarters Second Corps Area Office of the C. M. T. C. Officer, Governors Island, New York, March 9, 1934.

Subject: C. M. T. C. County Quota
To: Colonel Frank L. Meagher, 38 E. St. James street, Kingston, N. Y.

Chairman—Ulster County
1. There have been received to date 15 applications from the C. M. T. C. from your county.

2. As this fills your county quota it is requested that further recruiting cease and that the provisions of the enclosed letter be observed for the reasons stated therein.

Colonel, Infantry, C. M. T. C. Officer.

HEADQUARTERS SECOND CORPS AREA, OFFICE OF THE CORPS AREA COMMANDER, Governors Island, N. Y., March 9, 1934.

Subject: Termination of CNTC Enrollment Campaign.
To: Chiefs of Staff of Divisions, The Corps Area, State Aides, and County Chairmen.

1. With a quota of 3750, over 4000 C. M. T. applications have been received at the headquarters to date. There are more than enough applications on hand to fill all camps with principals and alternates, and many who have already applied cannot be accommodated.

2. It will be inadvisable to consider new applications, or to encourage new applicants to qualify as alternates, as it is believed that raising unwarranted hopes, doomed to disappointment, will have an unfavorable reaction for future C. M. T. Camps.

3. It is suggested that all new applicants be advised that enrollments for this year have been stopped and that if they wish to attend next year, they should submit their applications on March 1, 1935.

4. The above, however, does not apply to those counties which have not yet filled their quotas, as they will be given until March 15 to do so. In such counties it is desired the provisions of the foregoing be observed from the date the county quota is filled, or on March 15 at the latest.

By command of
BRIG. GEN. HOLBROOK,
S. G. TALBOTT,
Colonel A. G. D.,
Asst. Adjutant General.
